Friends Fred and Emma, both 19, were looking forward to their three-week holiday in Sydney, Australia. Their Air Canada plane took off from London with no problems, but when they landed at Halifax, the capital of Nova Scotia, in Canada, and were transferred to a small 25-seat propeller plane, Emma was slightly worried. She thought the plane was taking an unusual route. 'I'm not the best flyer in the world and I said I really couldn't imagine how such a small plane could go all the way to Australia. On the plane, immigration forms were handed out. We were asked how long we were planning to stay in Canada. I told the stewardess it would be only a couple of hours. She looked surprised, but she told us to write "two hours".'

It was only when they landed at Sydney on Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia, a town with a population of 26 thousand, that they finally realized their mistake. The journey (1) them just over ten hours instead of 22. While Fred and Emma's friends (2) to meet them at Sydney airport in Australia, Fred and Emma landed on opposite side of the world. They had booked their plane tickets on the Internet, and had chosen the wrong Sydney!

Sydney, Nova Scotia, is a small town and is not a popular tourist destination. Its main tourists sights are a park and an old house, although the countryside on the island is beautiful. Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, who died on Cape Breton in 1922, said, 'I have seen the Rockies, the Andes, the Alps and the Highlands of Scotland, but for simple beauty, Cape Breton is the best of them all.'

The story has a happy ending. Sydney, Nova Scotia, needs to attract tourists. The town used to produce steel and coal, but the industries closed down recently, so the tourism department was very pleased to have the publicity.

And what happened to Fred and Emma? They (3) the sights of Sydney, Nova Scotia and then they were given free plane tickets to Sydney, Australia.
