Koalas live only on the continent of Australia, to be more specific, in the forest of Eastern and South-Eastern Australia. They do not live in rainforests, as some people think. Koalas spend most of their time in the eucalyptus trees, sleeping for up to 16 hours a day. The only time they move is just after sunset when they go to another tree to stay asleep for the rest of the day. Koalas have soft, grey and white fur and sharp claws. They are about 70-80 centimetres long and weigh about 15 kilograms. Males are usually bigger than females. What is more, koalas living in the north are generally smaller than the ones from the south.

The newly born koala lives in its mother's pouch.

Koalas can live up to 17 years, although in fact males do not usually live more than 10 years. The sad fact is that almost 4000 koalas are killed every year, mostly by dogs and cars. As a result, there are now fewer than 50 thousand koalas left in Australia.
