In August 2019 three women entered a baby store in Middletown, New Jersey. Security footage shows that one of the women entering the shop had a child in her arms. In the shop, the women were looking around and after some time, one of the women went to the front of the store to steal a stroller, while the other two distracted an employee of the store. After stealing the stroller, three of them left the shop. According to CBS News, at least six minutes passed before one of the three women realised she had left her child in the store and returned to take it. The shop assistant called the police. After a few hours, the police were able to track down two of the three women. They were charged with shoplifting and conspiracy.
