Easy come, easy go

In 2002 when Michael Carrol was 19, he bought a lottery ticket for 1 pound and won a tremendous amount of money, over 9 million pounds, on the National Lottery. Within ten years, he spent almost the entire fortune.

When Michael Carroll hit the jackpot, he was an unknown boy. After becoming a multi-millionaire, he became famous. He boasted of his lottery luck. He generously gave away a major part of his winnings. For instance, he gave one million pounds each to his mother, his aunt, and uncle, his girlfriend Sandra, and Sandra's mother.

Then he spent the rest of his money on holidays and cars. Michael was not interested in saving or investing, he just wanted a funny and fabulous life. Michael bought a luxurious mansion and threw lots of wild parties for people. Then he bought two more houses and several luxury cars, but by 2005, he had £1 million left. A year later, he broke the law, and in 2006, he served jail time. The same year, he was also blackmailed by criminals and paid them £130,000.

By 2012, he was both broke and homeless.

Nowadays, he earns 10 pounds an hour working as a coal delivery man and says he is happier now than when he had lots of cash. He says: "It was ten years of fun for a pound (...) I wouldn't want to turn the clock back. But I live a good, free lifestyle now, and I'm happier because I've got my life back."
